BACK TO NATIVES RECEIVES $10,000 GRANT FROM WELLS FARGO FOUNDATION FOR VOLUNTEER HABITAT RESTORATION PROGRAM

IRVINE, Calif., October 3, 2010 – Back to Natives Restoration, a 501 (c)(3) nonprofit public charity has received a $10,000 grant from the Wells Fargo Foundation to support its Volunteer Habitat Restoration Program.

The Volunteer Habitat Restoration Service Learning Program aims to restore native habitat with the help of volunteers from the community. Service Learning is a teaching and learning strategy that integrates meaningful community service with instruction and reflection to enrich the learning experience, teach civic responsibility, and strengthen communities.

Back to Natives is collaborating with Mason Regional Park in Irvine, where volunteers will perform habitat quality monitoring, remove invasive plants and plant native plants in the Park's Phase III area, which remains wild, open space. Volunteers will become aware of their civic responsibilities, as they improve habitat for wildlife as well as humans. Volunteer dates will be listed on Back to Native's website, www.backtonatives.org.

"The program is intended to introduce potential science careers, and generate interest in the environment," said Back to Natives Director of Restoration Reginald Durant. "Volunteers will learn what it is like to be a real restoration ecologist, as they participate in the entire restoration process, from beginning to end. They will become aware that, even if they do not choose a career in the natural sciences, they can play a direct role in the health of their local natural areas."

Back to Natives strives to involve the community in the process of ecological restoration and conservation because it believes that a little "ecological enlightenment" and a chance to "get your hands dirty" is the best way to improve relations between people and nature.
